

Assistant Professor of Rhetoric and Composition with a specialization in Professional Writing and Communication Technologies

University of Alabama at Birmingham

Entry-level, tenure-track Assistant Professor of Rhetoric and Composition with specialization in professional writing and communication technologies. PhD in rhetoric and composition, professional communication, or related field must be completed by 15 August 2012 starting date. College-level teaching experience required. Teaching duties include undergraduate and graduate courses in areas such as rhetoric and technology, digital communication and publishing, and composition. 3/3 course load.

Our 30+ member department offers B.A. and M.A. degrees in a nationally ranked teaching and research urban university with more than 17,500 students. Review of applications will begin on 15 October. Send letter and CV to Rhetoric and Composition Search Committee, Department of English, University of Alabama at Birmingham, Birmingham, AL 35294-1260. Requests for writing samples and dossiers will be made after our initial screening. Preliminary interviews at MLA. Visit us at www.uab.edu/english. With a Carnegie Classification of Doctoral/Research Universities-Extensive, UAB is an EEO/AA employer and actively seeks applications from women and minority candidates.